The legislature of Indiana, at its recent session, adopted one law that is an outrage upon the people of that State, and that is the law that requires all legal advertising to be printed in both the English and German languages. This, of course, was done for the purpose of carrying favor with Germans. The result is that tax sales, sheriff's sales, settlements of estates, and all other legal papers may be supported at the expense of the people.

Bishop Lutz, of Delaware, who has been to Mexico to look after the interest of the Episcopal Church in that country, has returned home, and gives most flattering reports regarding the progress of the work of evangelization of that country. In an interesting lecture at Wilmington, last week, the Bishop stated that he found in the city of Mexico three thousand members of Protestant churches, and as many more regular attendants upon Protestant services. During his stay the Bishop ordained seven ministers and confirmed one hundred and thirty members of the church. He regards the rapid growth of Protestantism as very encouraging and remarkable, considering the strong Catholic influence with which it had to contend.

EX-SENATOR RAMSEY, of Minnesota, who was chairman of the Senate committee on post offices, has attempted to make an explanation of the increase of postage on third class mail matter. In the first place he denied that the express companies had anything to do with the matter, but does not deny that they will be greatly benefited by the increase. He says that "under the law as amended last June, the maximum weight of packages of third class matter was placed at four pounds, with postage at half a cent an ounce. The result was that the stage companies in Arizona and other parts of the country, which had mail contracts, were overloaded with four-pound packages which the express companies would have charged a dollar to carry. This evil increased so rapidly as to threaten to break down the stage companies, and they protested against it. After a full investigation of the matter, the postal committee decided upon two or three alternative amendments, the first was, restricting all packages to twelve ounces as formerly; the second, restricting all packages to two pounds; the third, doubling the rate of postage on third class matter. The first two being voted down, Senator Harlan introduced the third, and it passed."

This may all be true, but if it is, it shows a wonderful sight of consideration for the interests of two or three stage coach companies away out in Arizona. To relieve them of the burden of carrying four-pound packages, every man, woman and child in the United States is compelled to pay double postage on their papers. Mr. Ramsey would have done better to have kept still entirely. The people supposed that there was some weighty reason for the action of the committee in recommending the increase of postage, but Mr. Ramsey's explanation is so utterly frivolous that it leaves the matter in a worse light than before.

THE HON. L. Q. C. Lamar tells a very good story of which he is himself the hero. It will be remembered that, during the John Young Brown discussion in the House last session, Mr. Lamar was on the point of saying some thing very wicked, but he suddenly checked himself, and merely threw out a dark intimation of his angry thought. The subject was afterwards revived at a dinner party, and Mr. Lamar was asked to repeat his terrible speech that he was going to fulminate and didn't. This is the way he satisfied the dinner party, according to his own report.

You will remember, I said to them, that once upon a time a friend met Mr. Thackeray, and said to him, "Mr. Thackeray, the book of Vanity Fair, closes leaving Becky Sharp half hidden behind the door, with a long keen knife gleaming in her hands, and her eyes aflame with jealousy and passion, bent upon a man sitting with his back turned to her, writing at a desk. Now, I want to know what did Becky Sharp do?" "My dear fellow," says Thackeray, tapping him on the shoulder, "that is exactly what I have always wanted to know myself." You can very well imagine that I was not troubled with any more requests to rehearse my unborn speech.

ARGENTIA ITEMS.

EDITORS REPUBLICAN.—Noticing from time to time the various items of news from our sister towns appearing in your valuable columns, perhaps you would not object to giving place to a few from the quarter of the heritage of the "Genus Homo."

Our farmers are beginning their spring work. Some are now plowing for small grain in localities where the ground is high and rolling. Our roads are in a fair condition for moving about.

Recurring to our little village, we are still in the hope of securing respectable proportions in due course of time. We propose to grow up with the country and not in advance of it, so that our growth will be healthful and permanent.

We have a new firm in the commercial line. Our mutual friends David M. Adams and S. P. G. Lewis, have purchased the frame building formerly occupied by Mitchell & Co., and are going to move it to another and more central place for business, and will use it as a dry goods and grocery store until the fall, when they propose to erect a fine two-story brick store building for their use. They are fine business men and deserve success. They will be in full blast in from two to three weeks. We need still two or three more good substantial business firms.

Mr. Vaughn has formed a copartnership with Mr. J. Dunbar, in the blacksmithing business, and they are driving things lively, and have a good business.

Ellis & Grosley are still catering to the wants of the people. They are good honest men and richly merit the success which they enjoy.

The United Brethren are expecting to move their church from the "old burg" to this place, and will also erect a parsonage, for their pastor, some time this summer. Our gentlemanly town proprietor, H. C. Griffin, kindly donates the lots for their church and parsonage. This speaks well for Mr. G., and if he only had one of the daughters of the land to wife, then he would be a man in every sense of the word.

The Methodist society of this vicinity have nearly money enough subscribed to build a very nice church edifice; as soon as a few more hundreds are added to their already large subscription, they will begin its construction.

BEECHER-TILTON

The Nestling Business.

BEECHER'S STORY OF THE WOODHULL.

The Connecticut Election.

New York, April 6.—Beecher continued his testimony in the Beecher-Tilton trial this morning. When Mrs. Tilton raised the question of separation, besides telling her to ask Mrs. Beecher for advice, I applied to George A. Bell, a member of the church and a deacon, to take part. I stated the facts to him, and asked what had better be done, and that was the end of it; he said it was a case which should not be meddled with, Moulton and myself often had conversations in regard to Tilton's affairs, he said Tilton's house was mortgaged for $7,000, he suggested that the mortgage be raised and the house settled on Mrs. Tilton, I said when this was going to be done to let me be counted in; remember the first schooling bill of Bessie Turner; think it was in the summer of 1871, Moulton said he was paying a great many of Tilton's bills, and here was one I ought to pay, or something like that; I paid the bill; did not know that she was at school until I saw this account, I didn't suggest sending her to school, Moulton often applied to me for money, for expenses, never kept account of the money, but let her have it when I could; during these payments nothing was said about Tilton's going to Europe at the interview in the second week of February, at Tilton's house, I can't say that I didn't express regret, and I will not say I did not; the last thing done was to kiss each other all around; I didn't burst into tears for that, I remember the interview with Mrs. Tilton, in the fall of '71, witness asked what took place at that interview, but counsel on the other side objected, Judge Neilson, however, allowed it, and Beecher continued the interview was in daylight, the occasion and subject was suggested to me, I went into the parlor, marked a passage in the Bible, rose, bowed and walked out; I marked the thirteenth chapter, first Corinthians, 4th to 7th verses, this closed the interview, the ordinary farewell, I only recall meeting Mrs. Tilton subsequently at Moulton's in November, 1872, and last summer, and twice on the street, I don't remember meeting her at Sunday school, I only went there rarely, I have a faint impression I saw her at Friday night meetings, and may have addressed her [handed a letter,] I don't remember receiving this, but it is in Mrs. Tilton's handwriting; [handed another letter,] I don't remember giving this to Moulton; it was a habit of mine to carry Moulton all the communications which I thought would throw light on all matters of which he was the man in charge, and thus I suppose he received this letter. [Handed another letter,] I gave this to Moulton, it is from Mrs. Tilton. Here Everts read this, the "nestling" being used between Mrs. Tilton and myself; it was an uncommon word, I understood it to mean the hiding of troubles in the household.

Everts read a letter which began with a long quotation from Scripture, and thus continues: "This world ceases to hold me as it did. I live in the hope of coming immediately, and seems to me, most of the time to be standing on the edge of the other life, wondering whether I may not at any time hear a call to come up to a better. Hope you are gaining strength and growing happy. My wife takes the boat for Havana and Florida on Thursday. I called on Monday but you were out."

Everts asked what was the object of stating in the note that Mrs. Beecher was about leaving for Havana? Beecher objected, and an argument ensued. The Judge allowed the question. Beecher then said, in the announcement of my wife's departure there was no interest or purpose in respect to any visit of Mrs. Tilton. As a matter of fact, she was not at my house thereafter.

Everts [handing paper]. That says "If I don't see you to-morrow, I will next Friday night." A I recollect the circumstance. I knew Mrs. Tilton wished to see me about her mother or some other matter, and I dropped a hasty note; I would have seen her in the lecture room Friday night after regular prayer meeting, it is a night of errands, incidents, &c. there is no privacy in interchanges between me and my parishioners; it is very public, and generally from ten to twenty members from forty to fifty minutes, I think it was the next day Moulton, Tilton and myself had a conference about it; in an interview with Tilton a day or two afterward, he gave me an account of his visit to Mrs. Mrs. Woodhull's as follows: He told her who he was and he proceeded to say that he had seen a card in the morning papers and wished to ask whether that card referred to him and his family, and that she said it did, and then he said he never in his life brought to bear on any human being such an amount of personal influence as he did upon her. When he left it was with the understanding that all proceedings in this direction that were offensive to him, of that kind, should be adjourned or terminated—I don't know exactly which, that was the substance of the statement he made to me. He told me he reproached me for attempting to make war on him; inasmuch as he, like her, was a sufferer from proclaiming substantially the same ideas of social philosophy, and of divorce as she did; I did not understand him to say the same full theories of social reorganization, but some substantial theories of liberty of individuals and of divorce. I had no conversation whatever with Tilton or Moulton as to the steps taken by them, with my knowledge, with regard to that woman. I had nothing to do with her, except as she intruded her self upon me, and so far as I heard her eulogies from Tilton, and Moulton, I never counseled bringing her into the matter, nor the use of her in explanation of their conduct. They told me they thought the way to deal with her was to lay her under obligations to them. They did once ask me if I would not co-operate, and I absolutely refused to have anything to do with her. No such conversation, as testified to by Tilton, about making our wives acquainted with Woodhull, occurred. The only foundation for it was; Moulton and Tilton told me she was the most wonderful woman they ever met, and if ever her higher nature could be appealed to she would lead a revolution in the times in which she lived. I never counseled that she be associated with Elizabeth Tilton or Mrs. Moulton; I never thought of her. After coming home they said they hoped neither of their wives would make objection to her coming to either Tilton's house or Moulton's. I never did, nor anything of the kind.

Beecher here denied the story of Moulton, that, in consequence of the conversation with Beecher, he saw Mrs. Woodhull to influence her against the publication of that card. He continued: I may have had a conversation, but no such step was taken in consequence. I first saw Mrs. Woodhull in the summer of 1871 at Tilton's house; I was walking from Moulton's house one Sunday afternoon, with Moulton, we came near Tilton's and he said, "Look here, let's go and see Tilton. Mrs. Woodhull is going to be there this afternoon." I refused at first, but he said it would be better; that I'd better do it, and I consented to his urging and saw her. In entering the house I saw somebody in the back parlor. Don't remember seeing Mrs. Tilton at all. Mrs. Woodhull was up stairs in the reception room. I was escorted there and left alone with her. She was waiting for me apparently. She received me most cordially, both hands shaking mine, and had long desired to see me, etc. The interview lasted 10 or 15 minutes, not longer I know. Nothing was said, no allusion was made to the difficulties of Mr. and Mrs. Tilton and myself. I next saw her on the occasion of the yacht race. I was invited by Moulton, who was understood to be the head of the party. Tilton, Oliver Johnson and others were present, but not Mrs. Tilton. We landed at the ferry, and we dined with Moulton by invitation, and took quite a party. At the table I found myself next to Mrs. Woodhull. We had very little talk, and nothing was said on the subject. I think I never saw her again till she came to have me preside over the Stearnway Hall meeting.

St. Louis, April 6.—A drunken wretch named John Carney, living in the rear of 705 South Third street, cut his wife's throat while he lay in bed, at about 4 o'clock this morning, and shortly after drew across his own. Both will probably die.

NEW HAVEN, April 6.—Governor Ingalls's majority over all is about 6,500. There was a largely decreased prohibition vote, the total vote in the State being about 2,400. The Senate will stand almost Democratic to six Republicans, a gain of two for the latter. The Republicans have also gained in the House, but there still will be a Democratic majority of about twenty. Starkweather, Republican, is re-elected to Congress over ex-United States Senator Foster.

FROM OREANA. OREANA, April 6, 1875. EDITORS REPUBLICAN.—My communication of last week, referring to the action of the Reform convention at Whitmore township, in ordering the supervisor to pay for the tickets out of the township funds, had the effect to call out a handbill from Joe Ray, secretary of the convention, in which the statement is denied, and some very scurrilous language used with reference to the writer. The handbill, while it purports to give facts, is a base misrepresentation, and the whole thing belongs to that party and not to the Republicans. Mr. R. Kirby, the mover of the question in regard to printing tickets, was asked to explain his motion, whether he meant to have the township pay for the printing? He said he did, as the township had always paid, it was right, this was the people's convention—not a party's—therefore they had the right to use the people's money. C. H. Garver, the chairman, was asked the same question, and explained in the same manner. S. G. Coole, J. P., when interviewed, gave his decision in the same way. I can prove by J. M. Bower, James Johnstonberger and J. H. Alexander, the truth of my statement. Whitmore has saved $150, and the Magnet and Tribune, or some other paper, have had their cash replenished, if they have paid for the printing of "A Lie-nailed," and now spiked on their own heads.

These men now claim that they were only aiming a joke, and intended to raise the money on the day of election to print tickets. A word will explain: For several years past both parties have met together in one convention, and nominated two candidates for each office. At Town meeting, some five or six years ago, it was decided that the township pay for the printing of tickets, and such has been the case until the present time. I do not remember of a vote being taken but the one time since then by mutual consent.

You will see who is right and who is wrong. The Republican party—a party of justice and loyalty to the country, which shows fraud in its true light, has a right to know where the people's money goes. This handbill, so liberally distributed to all, shows that the party which is "stirring up strife," &c., is the opposition party.

I have no confidence in a party who will have a man ride all day Sunday electioneering and trying to influence men to vote with their clique. I have thus stated the facts, and do not propose to take up the "quill" again, for I would not condescend to use such vile language as has been used against our party, and knowing that they know no bounds when thus assailed, I leave the people to decide.

Yours, &c., JUSTICE.
